

Gowns Worn By The Smart Women Of Washington

Mrs. Draper Wears Her Famous Rose Point Lace—Mrs. Mann in "Kitten-ear" Cloth—Elena Calderon's 1830 Costume.

Mrs. William F. Draper wore her famous rose point lace for the dinner-dance she gave on New Year's Eve. The gown was of mauve satin veiled with mauve chiffon, and a flounce of this historic lace is draped around the skirt forming two points, one on each side. This flounce is edged at the top with a band of rhinestones. The lace is brought over the shoulders, ending at the waist line in front and falling in two points some distance below the waist line in the back. The front of the bodice in front is trimmed with rhinestones. With this she wore three strands of graduated pearls about her neck, which fell to the waist line, and a black velvet band about her throat, embroidered in diamonds in the front. In her hair she wore a band of diamonds in the pattern of the walls of Troy, which stands about an inch high. She carried a large bunch of orchids, which toned in with the shade of her gown. Mrs. Draper never wears this gown outside of her own home, owing to the great age and value of the lace, which formerly belonged to the Empress Eugenie, Mrs. Draper's father, the late Mr. Preston, purchased it for Mrs. Preston when they were in Spain.

Mrs. Margaret Draper wore a very simple but very effective gown that evening. The skirt was of shellpink chiffon velvet made very simply, with a tulle of gold lace, which was rather full and fell about half way down the skirt. The bodice was of gold lace and net, with sleeves of the lace and a very broad soft giraffe of the chiffon velvet. Her only ornament was the string of pearls which her father gave her on the evening of her debut, just three weeks before his death.

Mrs. Frances Moore is the only debutante, so far, who has not worn an evening gown at the afternoon tea when she made her formal bow to society. Her gown at the tea which Mrs. Clarence Moore gave for her just before Christmas, was a light blue tulle afternoon dress, the skirt of which was draped, giving an effect of long, slender lines. There was no trimming except at the neck, where a dainty bit of white finished the gown.

Mrs. Moore was also crowned in an afternoon costume, which was of black champagne, made very plain.

Mrs. James E. Mann is wearing a very becoming street costume of rich dark green "kitten-ear" cloth, which means that the material is as soft as the back of a kitten's ear. The skirt is circular and perfectly plain, and the coat is double-breasted, with a long, pendulous swing, which is held up by buttons toward the ankles. The only trimming on the suit consists of large jet buttons. With this she wears a black fur collar and a large soft hat with a black veil and a black velvet sash trimmed with a single soft feather.

Mrs. Genevieve Clark, daughter of the speaker of the House of Representatives, is wearing one of the daintiest evening gowns. It is made of lace with an overskirt of pale pink tulle which is draped in front and held with clusters of pink sweet peas. The bodice is entirely of lace, with the tulle coming up from the belt line into points at the shoulders. She wore this gown at the tea which Col. and Mrs. Graves gave for their daughter, Miss Laura Graves, last week, and with it she wore a hat of tulle and satin bands with a soft low crown and sailor brim, all in the same shade of pink, with small clusters of pink sweet peas about the base of the crown. In her belt she wore a good sized bunch of pink and pale lavender sweet peas.

Miss Mary Louise Howser, a debutante of two seasons ago, is wearing a very smart street costume of rough material in a soft green trimmed with bands of lamb's wool. The skirt fits snugly about the hips and flares to a very generous width at the bottom where there is a broad band of lamb's wool. The jacket is short and rather full at the waist line, though tight-fitting about the shoulders. The coat fastens close about the throat, being finished with a soft band of the fur which forms a collar. The cuffs are of lamb's wool. With the costume Miss Howser carries a muff, roomy in the center but close about the wrists. Her hat is a sailor shape in pale gray with narrow old rose ribbon about the crown hanging in short streamers from the back of the brim.

A new evening gown of Elena Calderon has been attracting widespread admiration this season. It is of white liberty satin, with narrow ruffles of white tulle edged with narrow black satin ribbon from waist to ankles. Each ruffle is fuller as it nears the bottom of the skirt, making a graceful flare. The skirt is ankle length and shows pretty tango slippers of black with black lacing with which Miss Calderon wears white with hose. The bodice is of white satin in the new basque effect, straight and close-fitting, ending in a point just below the waist line in front. Tiny ruffles matching the skirt form the sleeves. When wearing this gown Miss Calderon arranges her hair in the simplest fashion, parted in the middle and drawn plainly down over the top of her head and finished in a tiny curl behind each ear. The whole is a perfect reproduction of a belle of 1830.

One remarkable costume, which attracts much attention at Chevy Chase quite recently, was of black velvet, sleeveless, and very plain about the bodice, but with a full skirt, which flared more and more as it neared the ankles. The bottom was finished in five generous scallops, the point where the scallops joined being marked by a single white gardenia. The tulle slippers of black and the black silk hose were among the most attractive of the floor. With this costume she wore a black tulle scarf. The wearer had snowy hair and was plainly past middle life, but she was popular enough to never sit through a dance and was constantly on the floor with a good partner.

Mrs. Frederick E. Chapin, one of the most fascinating matrons in society, has appeared in a stunning box for coat, hat and gloves. It is of seakins, rather tight-fitting about the neck and shoulders, and with fairly tight sleeves, the skirt is of Russian sable and the cuffs are big and deep and edged with a band of sable to match the narrow collar.

Wonderful Skin and Wrinkle Removers

The method of removing bad complexion by absorption seems to have come into general use in this country. Ordinary mercurized wax, applied nightly like cold cream and erased mornings with warm water, gradually absorbs the coarse, faded or discolored outer skin in almost invisible particles. Soon there is a brand new complexion, formed by the younger, healthier under-skin. No cosmetic or artificial treatment can possibly produce a complexion of such radiant, youthful loveliness. Druggists all have mercurized wax; it is seldom that more than one ounce is necessary. Thousands have also reported great success with the famous axolite wrinkle-removing formula. One ounce of pure powdered axolite is dissolved in a half-pint which hazel and the solution used as a face wash. The effect is almost magical. The deepest wrinkles and crow's feet, as well as the finest lines—whether due to age, illness, weather or worry—completely and quickly vanish. No one need hesitate to try this simple lotion, as it won't harm any skin—Adv.

WHITE SULPHUR SPRINGS.

The new year started in with a spell of the weather, almost spring-like, which collected the disappearance of Christmas snow sufficient for sleighing and enabled scores of rather impatient golfers to return to the links. The New Year's Eve parties in the grill were unusually gay night before last. There was a formal hop in the ballroom until midnight and dancing among the refreshment tables in the Japanese room until several hours later.

Mr. and Mrs. Edward J. Katschenbach, of Trenton, who have arrived for a fortnight's stay, were among those entertaining at dinner New Year's Eve. Some of the other attending dinner parties here that night included W. P. Billings, Miss E. H. Long, Mr. and Mrs. Oswald F. Roche, Mr. and Mrs. James Zucker, Mr. and Mrs. Walton Ferguson, Jr., Norman L. Dike, A. K. Slasenger, Frank W. Lockier, Leonard T. Brown, S. S. Coleman, Elvan D. Haines, William Ahern, Daniel Lockwood, Philip Collins, C. A. Smith, Henry Bock, Karl Pink, Jack Easter, William Lockwood,
